Supreme Court Hears

Michigan's supreme court heard arguments last Thursday in the appeal of Ingham county from the decision of former Judge Charles B. Collingwood awarding a judgment of $20,583.20 to Andrew Lang of Mason, Former Judge Collingwood heard the case without a jury last September. He held that the county was negligent in allowing a drainage ditch to be improperly filled on the Mason-Howell road in May of 1930 when Andrew Lang, Mrs. Metta Linsea and Mrs. Claude Perrin Presbyterian Pastor of Mason drove over it and were wrecked.

A jury found no cause for action in the suit of Mrs. Linsea. The court, TO BE DELEGATE TO SUNDAY sitting without a jury, found the opposite in the case of Mr. Lang who was permanently crippled as a result

SUPERVISORS TO HAVE RELIEF BOARD CONTROL

NEW SET-UP PLANNED FOR RE-LIEF COMMISSION.

Chairman Of Board Of Supervisors To Have Place And Will Recommend Third Momber.

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald and Dr. William Haber, chairman of the State Emergency Relief Commission, have devised a new plan in the make-up of county emergency relief commissions. The present members of county relief commissions were appointed by former Governor William A. Comstock with vacancies filled by the governor. The new plan calls for the chairman of county board of supervisors or a supervisor appointed by him, the present chairman of the county emergency relief commission and a third member to be appointed by Dr. Haber on recommendation of the board of supervisors to serve as the relief commission. Dr. Haber announced Tuesday that he new plan has been placed in effect n order to secure greater public support, better understanding and more ocal interest. However, the supervisors have long been suggesting some such plan in order to cut costs which are said to be as high now as they were during the depth of the depres-

No changes are being contemplated n the state commission, its personnel or basic policies. Dr. Haber announced. Dr. Haber's commission will continue to supervise and administer local relief funds as at present.

In a bulletin Tuesday Dr. Haber declared that no employee of state and county relief commissions may hold elective offices or be candidates for office. Neither may they be active in politics, Dr. Haber said.

Another new policy of the state relief commission is a plan for civil service to remove the administration of relief from the control of politics, Dr. Haber said. It is proposed to select employees on a basis of merit after examinations are held and experience and training are considered.

BETTER STICK TO RELIGION

The writer of this column is a Presbyterian by way of denominational affiliation. The foregoing statement is made in order that the discussion which follows may not be taken as an attack by a member of one sect upon another sect.

Last week the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church was held at Syracuse, New York. According to press reports of the conference, there was some wrangling over religious matters, much of which subject matter was laid on the table as too controversial. On other subjects the assembly appeared able to agree.

The subjects on which the assembly did agree are interesting to note. As a member of the Presbyterian church, this writer is by the resolutions, at least to some degree committed although to his knowledge however, none of the questions passed upon at the General Assembly have ever been up for consideration by any local church and so far as is known no member of the local church ever had opportunity to consider or express an opinion regarding any of them. Certainly no vote of the congregation has ever been taken on any of the subjects and this writer is willing to lay a substantial wager that were any or all of them submitted they would be voted down by an overwhelming majority.

The resolutions adopted at Syracuse included approval of the federal child labor amendment, an endorsement of a policy of collective bargaining, opposition to compulsory military training in colleges, and a demand for repeal of the Asiatic exclusion act. These are not all the social and economic questions debated and decided but the list shows a fair sample of the lot.

Child labor will settle itself so far as industry is concerned and so far as working about the home or on the farm, more children are injured by not working than by making themselves useful. Compulsory military training includes ROTC training at such colleges as Michigan State. To blindly condemn that is certainly taking a church body out of its realm.

But the height of silly resolutions is reached in demanding repeal of the Asiatic exclusion act. To argue that America should be thrown open to unbridled coolie labor at a time when millions of Americans are out of work, certainly strikes no responsive chord of public

Not only did the delegates act without authority of the membership, they also acted contrary to the opinions held by most members of the local churches. Not being able to agree on religious subjects and desiring to have something to resolve about, it is evident the delegates went ahead and framed a set of resolutions on subjects they knew little concerning and in a manner which gives offense to most of those they were supposed to represent. Fortunately little attention is paid to resolutions from such bodies and so little harm is done.

Nevertheless suggestion is made that the next time the Presbyterians assemble they stick to religious subjects and if they cannot agree on these, that they leave the social and economic questions to those who know something about them. Delegates to such assemblies are seldom qualified and never authorized to speak for their membership on questions such as covered by the delegates at

A FEEBLE THREAT

One of the most inconsistent items of recent date just fell under editorial glimpse. An upstate sheriff calls down upon the heads of cattle thieves the most severe penalties of the law, asserting that such thefts must stop and his declaring his intention to see that they are stopped. And then in the next sentence the sheriff sets up an alibi for himself by declaring that modern transportation by truck makes apprehension of stock thieves who enter farm yards at night, almost impossible. He asks all citi-

In other words all the effect of his publicized threat is washed away when he admits he is helpless to apprehend. His desire to escape criticism overcame his desire to render service.

TRANSPORTATION COSTS

A century ago, the nation's transportation facilities were measured largely in miles of navigable canals. The Detroit Free Press of June 8, 1836, boasted that in these United States there were 3000 miles of canals, which added to the navigable rivers and the Great Lakes supplied the arteries of commerce for that period. Students of geography of that time are reminded that markets and shipping centers were developed and cities were built around these facilities.

Then came the railroad age. Canals were forgotten, their locks crumbled, grain elevators built along their banks fell into stagnant water and new cities and new markets sprung up along new arteries of travel and transportation. The next step came with the electric train and interurban service-quick and frequent service at cheapened rates. The last mentioned class was short lived because the very demand they were qualified to meet was the same demand which prompted the development of the motor car industry.

During these intervening years the railroad systems clung to their traditions, content to rest on laurels gained when the field was their own. Now after two decades during which the continent has been spanned and crisscrossed by hundreds of thousands of miles of smooth surfaced highways and during which time millions and millions of individual units of transportation units have been sold to the public everywhere, in city and country, the railroads are making a strong bid for return to popular favor. Indifference to public demand has given way to a heralded desire to render faster, safer and cheaper transportation for passengers and freight alike.

A recent survey shows that in most sections of the country the existing railroad and highway facilities are sufficient to carry all the freight and passenger business offered within reasonable time and at reasonable rates. The time has come, some argue, for a halt in further highway development except as to secondary roads.

Another survey, made in several places in several states, shows that 92 per cent of the motor vehicle traffic has no need for the type of highway provided. In other words when an expensive, reinforced concrete slab of extra thickness with corresponding bridges and easy grades is built, the extra cost is occasioned by a demand which comes from eight out of 100 units of highway transport. A similar survey made on several secondary the point of mutual love and considerhighways now under construction to be built of heavier ation, it will be better to put the elecconstruction, discloses the fact that only two per cent of the vehicles now using those secondary roads require stronger paving or easier grades than now provided. To build all these secondary roads so as to stand the wear and tear of heavy commercial hauling simply means that 98 per cent of the extra cost is occasioned for the special benefit of two per cent of the existing traffic.

It would seem that a survey should be made in every! state to determine just what further extensions of heavy more than they earn. paving are required. There are types of highway construction entirely adequate for the ordinary passenger vehicle which cost a fraction of what a heavy, reinforced steel and concrete pavement will cost. Plain common sense would seem to decree that future read health of the stream would seem to decree that future read health of the several institutions for the brides, we have been able to worry would seem to decree that future road building should along.—Schuyler Marshall in Clinton be planned so as to serve actual normal needs of traffic as they exist and as they are likely to continue. There is not enough money in any pocket to make every public highway into a roadbed for freight trains and busses.

Vast sums of public money were sunk in canals which be proud. One of the things which never paid their way. At one time the Erie canal in New has been noticeable for a number of York state was the most important asset of that region. Years is the deplorable conditions ex- but nevertheless they are ones that For several years it returned a substantial profit to the several years in the several y state. Today it represents a total investment of public money amounting to $300,000,000 and costs New York of society for their own good and our ever collected by any administration taxpayers annually more than $10,000,000 for interest protection. and maintenance charges. Broken down into tons of freight hauled, it means that New Yorkers are paying three dollars for every ton freight which glides up and down its course. Freight hauled over the Ohio river costs people. Feeble attempts have been til we do at least this much. It is a the public twice as much as the cost of hauling it over made from time to time to improve disgrace to jail the sick. It is also the railroads. Lower Mississippi barge traffic will show conditions, but they have grown stead- unfair to other citizens to leave them similar conditions.

Who knows how much the public is being taxed to rovide transportation for freight by means of motor driven units hauled over our common highways? This of course would be found to vary in the ratio of the amount hauled. What is suggested here is to determine the type and cost of new highways on the basis of possible use. It is certainly a great and inexcusable waste of public money to build super-highways where secondary highways would serve the purpose. The fact that now and then a heavy unit might use the road is not enough.

The time has come, it would appear, when the facts should be known, and once known, made of practical value in planning future expansions of the highway systems.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The editor has a letter, a personal letter, from an acquaintance, that disturbs one's peace of mind. It is from a young man-not so young either, but looking rather into the face of middle life. He has been married but his wife died leaving the husband with children to be supported—the marriage and the coming of the children, followed by the tragic death of the young wife and mother, all combined to place heavy burdens upon this young adopted the total cost of 36 cents per man and interfere greeatly with plans decided upon for running foot is to be divided, the vileducational training and a professional career. Consequently it has been necessary to do anything, anywhere, anytime and carry on such study as would seem best and was available.

And so the young man writes in deadly earnest. He sets down his obligations, his possible earnings and other factors including the disturbing one that the work upon which he is now engaged is about finished and soon he will face the necessity of seeking new employment. Household bills are pressing in, he dare not quit work to finish his training. He sees only continued years of drudgery and worry unless he can raise himself above the common level and yet, like a galley slave chained to his oars, he is denied the chance to devote himself to the few weeks required to train him for other types of work.

The letter is concluded by this plaintiff cry, "So I must ask again, what am I to do?" And just as frankly this writer is forced to reply, "I do not know." Perhaps it might be added that this young man has ooked upon education as the means to a happy and easy church at Aurelius Center was laid life, rather than the means to serve best his family and yesterday. the world. 252 miles to the calon is how I doure it with Red Grown"

Mr. Lester Longbow, a prominent resident of Dozen Forks, R. R. 6, is known throughout the state for his untiring efforts in behalf of the Tall Stories Club.

A see, I was to be speaker o' the L evening at the annual Grange dinner over to Dozen Forks. I got all tidied up, sorta late, and then found the dratted car was out o' gas — and Dozen Forks all o' four miles away.

"Well, my wife had an idea. 'Wait'll I get that little bottle o' gas I got from the Standard Oil Station to kill the ants with,' says she.

"I lowed as how it was foolish, but we'd try it. So she brought out a little 2-ounce bottle and we dumped the Standard Red Crown it held into the gas tank. I started off, figuring mebbe I'd make a hundred rod.

"But I got past the next farm—and the next-'n 'fore I knew it there I was in front o' the Grange with the motor still runnin'. Figure it out for yourself...four miles worth o' distance on two ounces o' Red Crown. That's 252 miles to the gallon. That's mileage, mister! . . . Eh? . . . Sure, the whole Grange is using Red Crown now."

We think Standard Red Crown is good, too, but we refuse to be taken in by Lester's vivid report. It's not THAT good.

With "more live power per gallon," Standard Red Crown operates with less waste power per gallon. With it you can be sure of as long mileage per gallon as with any regular-priced gasoline you can buy—if not longer. But rather than make claims, Standard prefers to make it easy for motorists to find out the real facts about gasoline

The female lays her eggs upon the daughter, Miss Margaret, of Denver, grass, weeds or bushes, as is popularly supposed. The eggs hatch in a day or two into "wiggle tails" and the larvae stage lasts about a week. The larvae feed actively and are fed upon by mintor of the Leslie Local-Republican a number of years ago.

The winged insect emerges place. The winged insect emerges from the larvae in two or three days, and the time from the laying of the egg to the appearance of the winged insect may be as short as nine days, depending upon the weather and the abundance of food.

Although the larvae is an air breather, it is an aquatic animal and in this fact lies one secret of control of mosquitos. Spraying the surface of the water with a mixture of two parts of crude oil to one part of kerosene poisons and suffocates the larvae. The method is expensive, somewhat limited

The Age of Sanitation

In olden days, horrible epidemics swept the earth. Millions fell before the attacks of yellow fever, typhoid, smallpox and other loathsome ills. The basic cause was contamination caused by the lack of sanitation.

Not a century has passed since medical science traced the origin of epidemics and found the cure in drastic sanitary laws. That marked a widespread advent of scientific plumbing. Since then most contagious diseases have been brought under control. Epidemics are becoming rare.

You owe it to yourself, your family, and your community to see that your home is fully equipped with the most modern type of sanitary and heating equipment.
